

Supplemental Security Income and Working Healthy/WORK

In most instances persons receiving Supplemental Security Income (SSI) would not realize any real benefit from Working Healthy/Work. An SSI recipient automatically receives Medicaid benefits, without a spenddown or premium, making Working Healthy unnecessary. WORK was designed to provide Working Healthy recipients with the same services that SSI recipients receive on Home and Community Based Services (HCBS) Waivers.

Once an individual works enough to become ineligible for SSI cash benefits and health care, he/she may benefit from Working Healthy and WORK; however, it is always a good idea to discuss options with a Benefits Specialist before making any decisions.

Below are some questions and answers regarding SSI, Working Healthy and WORK.

1. If I am eligible for SSI and I am eligible for HCBS Waiver services, can I choose to enroll in Working Healthy/WORK instead?

You do not need Working Healthy/WORK if you are eligible for SSI.

2. Why not?

When you are eligible to receive SSI, you have a Social Security disability determination, which entitles you to:

- full Medicaid coverage, including prescription drug coverage, without having to meet a spend down or pay a premium; and
- HCBS services without paying a client obligation (if you meet an HCBS level of care).

3. How can I become eligible for Working Healthy and WORK?

First it might be good to understand how SSI works. To be financially eligible for SSI:

- your countable income must be less than the Federal Benefit Rate (FBR), $914.00 for an individual and $1,371.00 for a couple in 2023; and
- Your resources must not exceed $2,000 ($3,000 for a couple).

You may eventually be SSI eligible through the 1619(b) provision, a Social Security work incentive that allows you to have earned income over the Substantial Gainful Activity (SGA) amount ($1,470.00 per month; $2,460.00 per month if blind or visually impaired) without losing your continuing eligibility for some SSI cash benefit.

To be financially eligible for 1619(b), you must:

- have been eligible for and received an SSI payment based on disability for at least one month before you began working at the level called Break Even Point ($1,913.00) for those with the full Federal Benefit Rate; (maximum annual

- earnings for Kansas in 2023 is $38,975.00 for 1619b)
- still be disabled; and
- Meet all other eligibility rules, including the income and resources tests.

For example: An individual is eligible for the full SSI cash benefit of $913.00 and has no earned income. He begins to work and earns $1,470.00 or more (SGA in 2023), but less than the Break Even point. This individual will still receive some SSI, however not $913.00 (The Break Even point in 2031 for a person receiving the maximum amount of SSI is $1,913.00.)

A second example: An individual is eligible for $668.00 SSI and $266.00 Social Security Disability Insurance (SSDI) and has no earned income. She goes to work and earns more than $1,470.00 and $1421.00, (The Break Even Point for $688.00 in her SSI,) assuming she still has her SSDI Trial Work Period and Grace Period, she will be eligible for Medicaid under 1619(b), a work incentive which allows one to maintain Medicaid coverage if earnings alone, causes SSI cash to $0.00. She will eventually graduate from SSDI cash benefits if earnings continue above the SGA level and she may have her cash SSI if earnings continue to be less than the Break Even point.

To qualify for the 1619(b) work incentive, a person must:

- have been eligible for an SSI cash payment for at least one month;
- still meet the disability requirements;
- SSI cash benefits drop to $0.00 solely because of earned income;
- need Medicaid in order to work; and
- have gross earned income which is below the state or individual threshold level.

For example: An individual is eligible for the full SSI cash benefit of $914.00 and has no earned income. He begins to work and earns $2,000.00. He is now earning more than the Break Even point. He will not receive an SSI cash benefit, but he may continue to be eligible for Medicaid.

A second example: An individual is eligible for $668.00 SSI and $266.00 SSDI and has no earned income. She begins working and earns $1,600. She is now earning more than her Break Even point. Her SSI cash benefit will stop, but she may continue to be eligible for Medicaid.

4. Alright, but how can I become eligible for Working Healthy and WORK?

- You would need to earn enough money to end your need for an SSI cash benefit and 1619(b) status. Generally, this means earning more than the state threshold ($38,975 in 2023) or an individualized threshold. However, it is best to talk to the Working Healthy Benefits Specialist in your region to find out how much you will have to earn to graduate from your SSI cash benefit and 1619(b) status.
- You can end your SSI status in another way; by saving more than $2,000 ($3,000 for a couple). Warning: If you do this, you must make sure that you are making enough income each month to live on.

5. Why wouldn't I want to do this?

Earning money may mean you no longer need your SSI and it would end. If you stop working, Social Security may look at the number of quarters that you work, and you may be eligible for SSDI at an amount that makes you ineligible for SSI. Social Security Disability Insurance (SSDI) is federal disability insurance for people who are or become disabled and have been employed or had a parent or spouse who has been employed. The amount you receive each month is based on how long you or your parent or spouse worked, and how much was earned.

If you receive SSDI only, you may be eligible for Medicaid, but you also may have a spenddown or client obligation. Remember, when you receive SSI, or under 1619b, you also receive Medicaid without a spenddown or client obligation.

6. Couldn't I just apply for SSI again?

You may, but if your SSDI + $20.00 is greater than the SSI Federal Benefit Rate, you will not be eligible for SSI.

7. Will I always have a client obligation or spenddown if I only receive SSDI?

Yes, unless you are employed or become employed and enroll in Working Healthy.

8. What are the benefits of enrolling in Working Healthy?

Working Healthy benefits include:

- no spenddown or client obligation;
- ability to earn countable income up to 300% of the Federal Poverty Level (FPL);
- savings up to $15,000;
- Medicaid (except for prescription drug coverage if you also have Medicare) without meeting a spenddown or client obligation, though there may be a monthly premium to pay;
- payment of your Medicare Part B premium and
- help with Medicare Part D premiums, lower co-pays, and no gap in coverage.

9. Am I also eligible for WORK?

You are eligible for WORK if you demonstrate the same level of need for care as people on waivers and need personal assistance services to live and work in the community.

10. What are the benefits of WORK?

If you are eligible for WORK, you will:

- be provided a monthly allocation to pay for your personal assistance services;

- have access of around $7,500.00 per year for Assistive Technology if medically necessary and needed to maintain independence and employment; (sometimes individual situations can have higher amounts,) and
- have access to Independent Living Counseling services.
